TRILBY PARTIES.

"Trilby Parties" are a new thing at Asbury and it is just possible Mr. Bradley may not have heard of them. A "Trilby Party" might be otherwise described as a bench show of feet. H. A. Stiles invented them. He was called Hotel to get up something new. Donk ey parties had began to pall, progressive euchre bad lost its charm, the Saturday evening hop had become stale, flat and upprofitable. There was a demand upon Stiles for something new. Stiles rose to the occasion the boldly prop s d the beach show of ladies' feet. There were gasps at Stiles's rashness; there was even a bolding up of hands in horror on the part of some of the matrons. But, on the other hand, there were arguments. Even Mr. Bradley, it was advanced, W. F. Creighton & Co., and Richard W. F. Creighton & Co., and Richard W. F. Creighton & Co., and Richard was expectoration, fils manufactures the gives a good night's rest, and cures the gives a good night's rest, and the Pimary Department is carefully and th thing new. Stiles rose to the occasion. admitted the existence of feet. He went even further and allowed exposed feet on the boardwalk. The uplifted hands was lowered, but still there was a dubious shaking of heads.

"It doesn't seem right," said one of the married women, "but I don't know. If I were to go into the thing I think raigin Crampsand I'd wear those new clocked slik stockings. I've never had them on."
And so it was settled. The "Trilby Party" was approved. There were to be three prizes-first second and third. H. B. Bernard, civil engineer of the Long Brauch Railroad, and Charles R. Shantz, a manufacturer, were chosen as two of the judges, and they agreed upon Mr. Stiles to act with them as the

For several bours the three judges pored over books on foot anatomy. They did not stop there. One of them, it is said, visited a local physician and obtained from bim the necessary requirements of a perfect foot. In another case a chiropodis: was consulted. The result was that before the contest began the judges were deeply versed in The contest took place in the dining room of the hctel. Several sheets were sewed together and there served as a curtain. Behind this screen on a platform were the contestants, twelve in number. At S o'clock, with the dining room thronged with guests, Mr. Schroe der, who acted as master of ceremonies nnounced that the contest was open Twelve dainty ankles protruded from a profusion of lace skirts and the spectators were invited to come forward and examine them. Familiarities with the contesting feet were sternly barred by the master of ceremonies. Up and down the line, several times, warked the spectators passing judgment or cri icism on the feet. One of the onlookerhad the audacity to raise the curtain in an effort to find out to whom one of the feet belonged. The judges sat down on heavily. After five minutes review him Mr. Schroeder announced that the judges would now take their turn, and determine who were the prize winners Muffled laughter came from behind the curtain at times, as the examiners pick-ed up some particular foot in order to tudy its anatomy more closely. It was observed that the extensor brevis digi torum of one contestant's foot was not sufficiently developed; and that there was a depression in the plantar region. The tarsal bones of another were al right but the sessmoid bones did not come up to what Triby possessed. In the case of still another, the dorsal cuboides were to small, and the mea-tarsal figament of the fifth toe did not come up to what Trilby possessed. In the case of still another, the dorsal cuboides were to small, and the meta-tarsal ligament of the fifth toe did not show up well. One foot was thought by one of the judges to be entitled to first pr.z., but it did not pass muster with the others because the internal lateral ligaments of cause the internal lateral ligaments of cause the internal lateral ligaments of cause the internal lateral ligaments of the phlanges were not full enough. When the judges came to one foot that seemed at first glance faultless they are not full enough.

They noted that the abductor minimi digiti was all right that the cs cuboides were of the proper size and that the cs naviculare was perfect. To the owner was awarded the first prize, a gold necklace. After this the determination as to the award of the second and third prizes a bre-stpin and a pair of silk stockings, was an easy matter. It was the priv: lege of the judges to tie the blue, red and yellow ribbons, representing first, second and third prizes, on the ankles of the winners, and this they did while the orchestra played "Ben Bolt."

The curtain was drawn aside after the contestants had donned their footwear. In the excitement one contest. ant lost one of her slippers, but it was afterward recovered. The winner of the first prize is a young woman very well known and very popular bere.-[New York Sun]
